

Microcomputer Systems Technician: Randy Curtis

Activities:

The bulk of man-hours went to supporting the information technology infrastructure and slowly bringing the workstations online in the newly renovated Levi Watkins Learning Center. The infrastructure (network and power) was upgraded in the Title III laboratory and building-wide to provide maximum usage and efficiency of the space available.

Title III Computer Laboratory:

Analysis: The statistical trend of Fiscal Year 2011 - 2012 was the same as with most previous fiscal years with the Title III computer laboratory having increasingly more patronage than the last several fiscal years except for the 2009 – 2010 in which the library was housed in temporary structures. I attribute this standard trend of increased patronage due to the substantial staff and student-employee effort and other resources that are expended in maintaining the Title III computer laboratory. The long hours of lab availability is also attributed to the almost steady increase of patronage of the Levi-Watkins Learning Center's Title III Computer Laboratory.
